

ABSTRACT

A method of fabricating interconnection members for a microelectronic device. An electrically conductive sheet having a uniform thickness is coupled to a first surface of a support substrate. Portions of the conductive sheet are selectively removed so as to leave a plurality of substantially rigid, elongated posts protruding parallel to one another from surface of the support substrate.

416773_1.DOC